

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

5 A ferrule is attached to a terminal of an optical fiber. The ferrule is provided with a main body, and a leading end portion integrated with the main body to serve as a convex lens such that light emitted from a core wire of the optical fiber is made to be parallel light, while incident light is focused onto the core wire.